

Cross Border Business Law Blog

Resource for Doing Business in the U.S. – Installment #7 – Labor & Employment

By Brian Morrison and Sara Sandford on 7.12.16 | Posted in Employment

In our latest installment of our Resource for Doing Business in the U.S., we focus on key laws an investor in the U.S. needs to know when employing personnel in the U.S. These laws apply whether the personnel are transferred from abroad or hired locally – and, as you will see, there can be laws related to employees at the local, state and federal level. It's definitely an area where one cannot merely assume the laws will be similar to the laws at home. The laws also vary state to state and city to city within the U.S. To avoid exposing their employers to significant risks, even experienced Human Resources managers seek legal advice in this area.

By way of introduction to the topic, the installment you find here sets out the basics of what you need to know as a new U.S. employer.

Tags: AdviceOnline, employing personnel in the U.S., human resources manager, labor and employment matters, U.S. employer