Sports & Entertainment Spotlight: Rihanna's Bountiful Halftime Performance

By Joshua Bloomgarden on 2.16.23 | Posted in Sports & Entertainment Spotlight

Welcome back to the Spotlight! First, a hearty congratulations to the world champion Kansas City Chiefs (an empty gesture if there ever was one—as I am fairly confident none of the Chiefs read this, but if not, hit me up!). As in years past, the Super Bowl prove itself to be a pop culture spectacle par excellence (I don't know what that means, but it sure sounds fancy), with commercials of varying levels of poignancy, absurdity and cleverness, rife with athletes and entertainers and homages. Among the stand-outs, was the solo(-ish) halftime performance by Rihanna.

Indeed, nestled cozily inside what was a rather entertaining game, Rihanna, who's so famous that she's known only by one name, revealed that she had a baby nestled cozily inside what was a rather entertaining Rihanna. Tough act to follow for future baby announcements but perhaps Rihanna will opt for a more low-key setting for the eventual gender reveal, like the Olympic torch lighting ceremony.

Say what you will, but Rihanna made the most of a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity—headlining the Super Bowl Halftime Show—for which she was not even directly compensated. Since Sunday's performance (the second most watched Super Bowl halftime show), Rihanna's seeing an over 640% increase in streaming and a 390% increase in record sales. Neither this fact nor the towering heights the artist reached during her performance were likely on the artist's mind when she recorded the Oscar-nominated song "Lift Me Up," but it makes for an easy dad joke. Although Rihanna (herself worth upwards of $1.4 billion when factoring in her music career and various business ventures) did not need the resulting windfall, with another mouth to feed, she embraced the extra spotlight.

- Celebrity chef (and fabled enunciator of the word, "spaghetti") Giada De Laurentiis inks a first look television development deal with Amazon Studios. No squid were harmed in the process.
- The valuation of connected fitness company Tonal appears to have taken a big hit since the pandemic-related boom. Paired with the news above, it sounds like couch sales may go through the roof.
