

Sports & Entertainment Spotlight: Cher Sues Mary Bono for $1 Million Over Missing Royalties

10.21.21 01.07.26

- Cher filed a lawsuit against her late musical partner and ex-husband Sonny Bono's widow over the rights to many of their cherished Sonny & Cher songs. She asked the court to block the trust which handles Sonny's estate, the Bono Collection Trust, from terminating her rights that granted her 50 percent of the royalties under their divorce settlement. Under the Copyright Act, artists can cancel distributions of their copyrights and reclaim them after 35 years. This provision has been in the spotlight given the recent heated disputes involving Marvel and Disney. Will this case be monumental in shedding light on a gloomy area of copyright law that intersects family law? Let's see if the "Beat Goes On" for Cher.
- Fast food and A-list-celebrities - is there any combo more alluring? Over the years, an increasing amount of major global food names have partnered with top talent to entice the public to eat at their establishment. McDonalds has recruited Travis Scott, Burger King has Nelly, Taco Bell has Lil Nas X, and most recently Megan Thee Stallion has signed a new deal with Popeyes. Her new business venture includes multiple franchise locations, a six-figure donation to Houston Acts of Kindness, her own personal branded Popeyes hot sauce, and an exclusive merch drop including bikinis, shirts, tumblers, and even plush dog toys shaped like chicken tenders. What other mouthwatering partnerships can we expect to see next?
